

I disagree with the following practices of the wireless industry:

(1) charging for dead time, (2) charging for time waiting for unanswered or unconnected calls, (3) charging from the minute that the send button is pushed, and (4) rounding up of all "calls" to the end of the minute.

In effect, paying for time under the above conditions amounts to paying for services that were not rendered.